ABSTRACT

Active substance-containing therapeutic system for application on the skin, comprising at least two polymercontaining layers, characterized in that the polymers used for the different layers differ in their glass transition temperature (see Figure 1).

10